

CLAIMS

1. A system for caching of web pages, comprising:
 - a coherency management module monitoring data requests from a plurality of clients for web pages and maintaining a cache of signatures corresponding thereto, and the coherency management module utilizing the signatures to determine that an update of at least one of the web pages has occurred, and responsive to the determination sending an update notice; and
 - at least one cache module coupled to the plurality of clients to provide a cache of web pages requested by the plurality of clients and the at least one cache module responsive to the update notice from the coherency management module to update the associated web page in the cache.
2. A method for caching of web pages, comprising:
 - monitoring data requests from a plurality of clients for web pages;
 - generating a signature for each of the web pages;
 - utilizing the successive signatures of at least one of the web pages to determine that an update of the at least one of the web pages has occurred;
 - sending an update notice responsive to said utilizing act.